MARRIAGE.

Hongkong, November 28th, 1878.

The subject of Coroners' Juries having recently attracted attention, an extract which we give further on from the Law Times may be of some interest. It does not touch upon the point immediately under discussion here, but it calls attention to some matters of importance in connection with Coroners' Juries, which it will be desirable to take into consideration, should steps be adopted for the improvement of the existing system.

an opinion has aiready been expressed against it; and there is a further reason suggested by the article under notice. The amployment of a Jury gives to Coroners' Inquests a species of importance which they ought not to possess in the eyes of the public. They become in fact a species of legal proceeding in them. selves, instead of merely preliminaries to legal proceedings which ought in strictness to be considered to commende at the Magistrate's claim for the $50 reward for finding the body Court. The Coroner sums up, expounds the masters of sampans Nos. 4,399 and 1,332 aplaw, and the Jury find a verdict-proceedings peared to oppose, and produced a considerable which are very apt indeed to raise a certain amount of evidence, with a view to showing opinion in advance as to the merits of the from them by the constable. These opponents shoot a dog. He would recognise, however, and reefs on the 7th and 8th November, wind case, the public being not always possessed appear to save made two assertions, one; that what he had done to enable the man to S.W. and fine. It has further investigation was adjourned till is anomalous therefore, that Coroners' Inquests, which are still more of a preliminary nature, should adopt the forms which can only be pplicable properly to a much more advanced state of the case. On the whole, Coroners' Inquests have been so well conducted in Hongkong, that it would be invidious to complain of them; but still it is well known that it is very difficult for non-professional men to take testimony in a way which production of further evidence to show that in the boat was re-weighed, and found to be will not be in some cases defective, and at times the rules of evidence are seriously invaded. This is not of so much consequence if and the Attorney-General, who were both our the investigations are merely in the nature of a corned in the uniter, concurred in the proposal. preliminary enquiry, and are not looked upon as judicial proceedings in the strict sense; in Court, also expressed his concurrence, saying First defendant denied that he was one of the

It would be very desirable if the Coroner were a professional man, and we can see no reason why the function of Coroner should not be performed by one of the Solicitors in the Colony. It would, in fact, form an appropriate addition to the duties of the Crown Solicitor; and, provided that it would not be too expensive to employ bim for the purpose,there is no doubt that the plan would be would settle the matter. The application was conducive to the public interest. This point granted. might be taken into consideration with advantage in any reform which may be instituted. There could be little danger in entrusting those investigations to a qualified lawyer without the aid of a jury, as the functions he would perform would not be by any means so important in their bearing upon any case which might ultimately arise, as those which are daily performed by the Magistrates sitting alone; and tho ting, and then tying it tightly until it is thofamiliarity of a qualified lawver with the

WHAT IS A COMMANDER-IN CHIEF? The question, "What is a Commander-in-Chief?" appears, says the Broad Arrow, to agitate the minds of many of our correspondents from time to time, and especially do they seem to be concerned as to when and how the Duke of Cambridge was deprived of the title, and became the "commanding" instead of the ON NEW YORK .commander. The fact is, that His Royal Highness never was Commander-in-Chief. The Duke of Wellington was the last Commanderin-Chief of the British Army, and he was appointed by letters patent. These is a vast difference in pay and allowances between a Commander-in-Chief and an officer Commanding-in-Chief. The Duke of Cambridge is General Commanding-in-Chief, so was Lord Hill. His Royal Highness's position is that of Field Marshal on the Staff, but we think he only draws pay and allowances as a general."

INCOME-TAX. PRONUNCIATION. a Anglo-Chinese Dictionart, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. MOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous ob jects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word i fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast becoming of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have peretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. . THE TIDES AT ST. MALO. When the water is low, this small seaport town appears surrounded on all sides by fantastically shaped cliffs, covered with seawceds and barnacles. Pools of salt water interspersed here and there among the hollowed stones, or on the even ground between them, and harbouring namy curious varieties of marine animals, are the only visible signs of the vicinity of the ocean, whose hourse murmurs are heard resounding from afar. But an astonishing change takes place a few hours after, when the town, surrounded by the sea, would be a complete island, but for a long, narrow causeway called "the Sillon," which connects it with the mainland. the side fronting the open sea, the tida breaks with tremendous rage against the strong battresses that have been raised to oppose its fury, rises foamingly to a height of thirty or forty feet, and threatens the tardy wanthere'l as he loiters on the narrow causeway. The cliffs that erewhile were seen to surround the town are now hidden, under the waters, some few excepted; that raise-their rugged heads like minute islands above the cirmumpient floods. The opposite side of the causeway is also washed by the sea; but heroits motions are less tumultuous, for, after having broken against numberless rocks and of its primitive strength. On this side lies the vast, but deserted harbour of St. Male, completely dry at cob tide; a wide sea during the flood .- The Sea and its Living Wonders. By Dr. Hartwig. ON GETTING MARRIED. Why I should take pen in hand to perbetrate an article on "gelting married" when comingues where I can view the ceremony in breakfast friend. It certainly cost me a all its chastly details; I am far removed from | severe beating; but it was some comfort that the supposed enthralling powers of raven or my sisters' names remained unknown all the haburn hair, of black eyes or blue; I am far time I was at school; though to this day I out of the temptations of "dimpled smiles," could never understand the importance holders or not, in proportion to the net amount. what ever they may be, und the reddest of which was laid upon this secret in almost of Premie contributed by each, the remaining cherry lips have no charms for me whatever, every school in Ireland and, for aught I third being carried to Reserve Fund. know, in England, too, at that period.—From My treatment of the subject may, therefore, "Realities of Irish Life." herolied on as being absolutely impartial; and, if I may lean just a little towards the side of my own sex, I am perfectly justified indoing so, as I have never been "retained" by the other side. I have never been able to satisfactorily settle in thy own mind whether getting married is supposed to be a subject for rejoicing or mourning. Certainly, all the weddings I have seen would go to provethe latter. The bride has always been in tears—the bridegroom has always looked profoundly miserable. She seems to be making the best of a bad job, and he seems to be hoping that some one will charitably steri forward and stop the ceremony at the point where the officiating clergyman asks if anyone knows "any just cause or impediment, &c. There is one theory I wish to advance with regard to the bridegroom, and that is, that he has never paid for his wedding garments when he enters the church; he seems in constant fear lest his tailor should be at hand with his "little bill." Observe the way in which he sneaks from the hired carriage which generally has an appropriately futerent appearance—and glances furtively round! See how ill at ease he seems in these anything in my theory? Of course, in this exceedingly watery climate of ours, we must expect a constant succession of heavy downpours and short; sharp showers. But why should it always rain when marriages are going on? Are not the principal actors sufficiently depressed already? But for the singularly inappropriate nature of the simile.

one might say it was heaping coals of fire on man turned away with an expression on his face in which contempt and sadness were strangely blended, and in a low, heart-broken tone, said-" I never saw but one wedding in
